STATEMENT ON COPYRIGHT

Permission to obtain a photocopy, digital surrogate, or other facsimile of material does not constitute permission to reproduce, distribute, publicly display, publish, or make other protected uses of that facsimile if it is protected under copyright law (Title 17, U.S. Code). The user of the copy may engage in such protected uses if he/she obtains permission from the holder of copyright in the original materials; if the term of copyright in the original material has expired; if the use is a “fair use” under copyright law; or other applicable exemption. The user of the copy is responsible for determining what uses are lawful, to obtain any required permission, and pay any required fee. The University of Maryland does not hold copyright in most materials in the collections of the Libraries.
